Dedication

To Reverend James B. Keenan

O FATHER KEENAN, Priest,
Teacher, Benefactor and Friend,
in fond memory of the happy,
fruitful days which were sweetened for us by his guiding influence; to manifest as far as we are able our immeasurable thankfulness for his unceasing interest in our welfare of body and spirit; and to assure him that the affection and gratitude he has implanted in our hearts are as imperishable as the inspiration he has given to our lives, we humbly dedicate this volume.

Foreword

WITH aspirations and apprehensions equally great, the class of 1915 has compiled this Senior Annual with divers ends in view. The scope of its purpose embraces reminiscences of the past, activities of the present and vagaries of the future. The present, of course, is continually adding to the expansive past, while our participation in both tends to delineate the future. And so, we have sought to compress into these few pages some permanent record of our pleasant association with our Alma Mater, so that in coming years time will not have diluted the sweetness of memory and our school life will have meant more to us than merely the acquirement of knowledge. When these happy student days shall have joined the multitudinous army of by-gones and exist only in fantastical shapes among the mists of memory, if this book awaken for one gladdened moment any smouldering thoughts of the intermingled joys and vicissitudes which have comprised a very efficient secondary education, the object of this volume shall be fulfilled at least in part, and the Senior Annual of 1915 shall not have been published in vain.

To Alma Mater

O tarry radiant hours of to-day,
For naught more sweet can future hours hold;
Ah! fain would we with Alma Mater stay,
'Tis at her shrine we found a peace untold.
O Alma Mater dear, thy hallowed halls
Are stored with memories bright and sweet and rare,
And loved alike by those who have departed,
And by thy children who still linger there.
For thou hast brightened e'en the darkest hour
Through four long years, yet now too short they seem;
Thy guiding hand, thy ever loving care,
Full worthy are of a true poet's theme.
To-day, with joy the laurel crown we claim,
Yet one small cloud our sky doth overcast,
With hope's fair promise of a future bright,
There comes the thought of parting with the past.
All hail! then and farewell, O Mother dear,
But ere we go our life-work to pursue,
One boon we ask, thy blessing do we crave,
To spur us on to nobler deeds and true.
Honora Miller, '15.

The Wonders of Spring

It was in the soft perfumed rain that I found,
In the swaying flower-bells' musical sound,
In the passing flash of a brown-tipped wing,
That I found all the wonder of the glorious Spring.
It lay in the down of a puss-willow's head,
In the bright eyes of violets, just up from their bed;
It came from the motherly song of a bird,
That sweetest of melodies the world ever heard.
It swelled in the tender, green blades upsprung,
Like a verdant new world, in a god's whim begun;
It blew in the angel's breath of a breeze,
Which rustled to laughter a voice in the trees.
It shone in the light of a heav'n-born sun-man,
Who caressed with a smile this nature-blessed land;
It lurked in the sweetness of kisses of dew,
Sparkling on buds all bursting anew.
It's but a suggestion of what God can give
A foretaste of heaven in which we shall live;
Abridged in the glory, the lilt and the swing
Of the year's resurrection, the dawn of the Spring.
Kathryn Laffin.

Vale

VOLUME in a word; an ocean in a tear! How profound in its sentiment, how expansive in its meaning—this single word, farewell.

It is long, very long, though now it seems too short, since first we beheld, in the dim distance, this goal of achievement and longed for the privilege to say this word of leave-taking. That long-awaited moment has arrived. We are possessed of the power to say one word whose utterance unlocks immense portals through which men pass onward into the future. And are we content with our triumph? Let us consider.

We pause on a mighty threshold, commanding a view in each of two directions. One is familiar to us. Every foot of its way is marked with signs of our perseverant labor for advance and every object by the wayside conjures some memory of a joy or of a vicissitude. The record of the journey which brought us hither abounds in smiles and laughter; it tells also of placid moments and troubled frowns, and it is not devoid of tears. The other side if the portal is new and strange. A heavy mist conceals those things which are only disclosed by being sought. It hides things for us which we will later have reason to welcome or regret. No mortal has any inkling of the nature of its hidden depths.

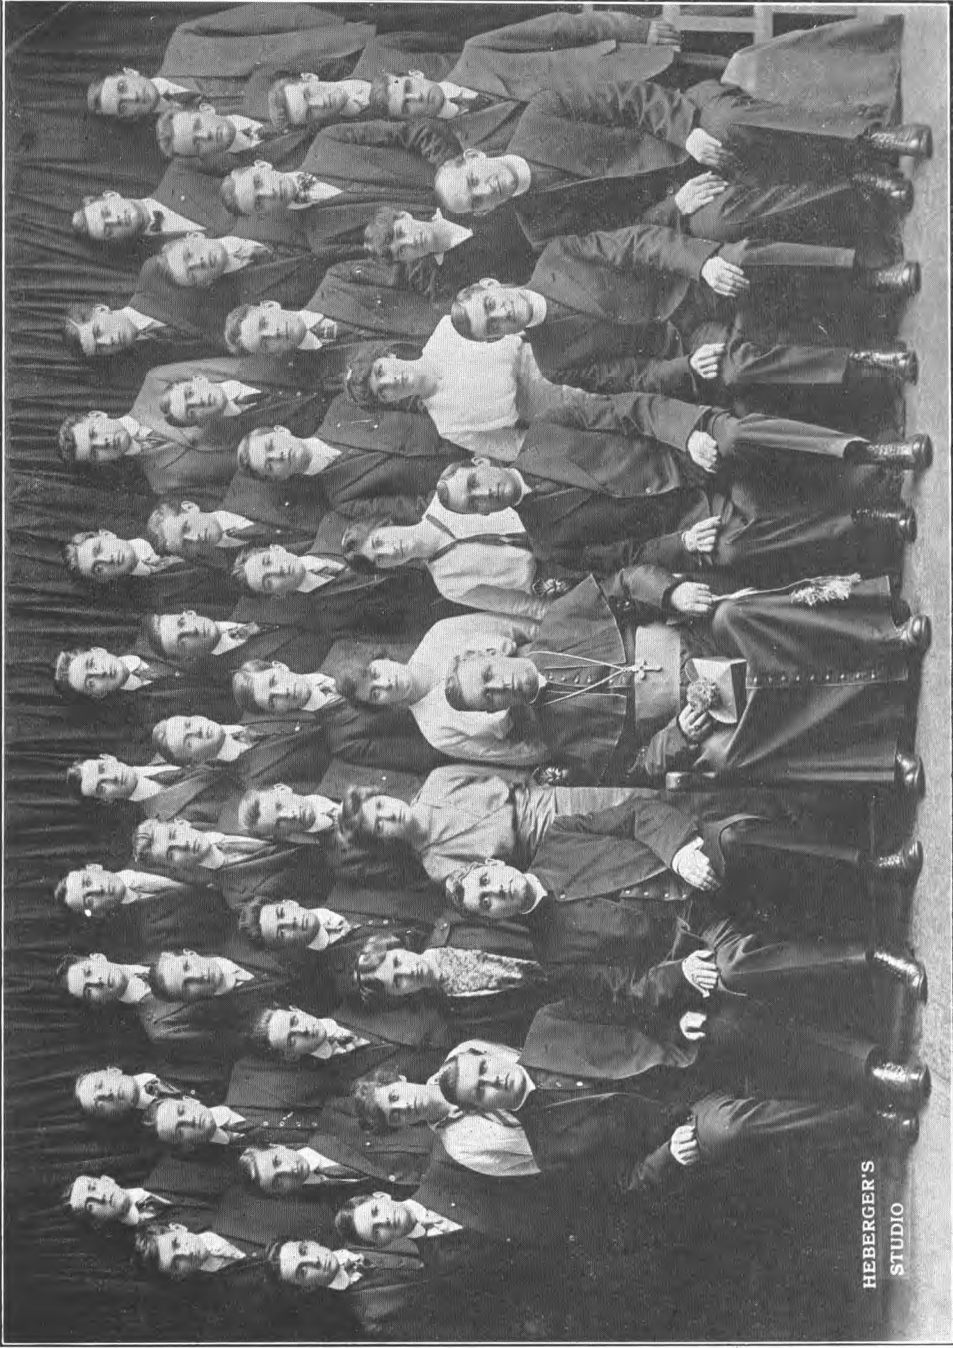

The former is our past, beloved in memory and as yet, very limited. Its better part began with our high school life, four years ago. It was then that Alma Mater received us in her maternal arms as young, immature, unsophisticated children. It was not long before we had learned the sweetness of her voice, mellowed by the inspiring and assuring tone of religion, instilling faith and charity in our hearts, implanting the seed of truthful knowledge in our lives. We could not help but be encouraged by the gentle, guiding touch of her benevolent hand, and we could not fail to be influenced by the very atmosphere which exudes from her hallowed name. Much has been inscribed in our portion of the Book of Life during these four years and the shaping of each gilded letter of it found its beginning with the principles of our school foremost in our minds. We grew up with our school, its growth and development being ours. What a hoard of reminiscences has accumulated, what a wealth of lasting friendships has been built up, each part of them making the dear old halls nearer and dearer to us! True, there has been trouble and sorrow among us, but has not each little pain and every sacrifice chained our affection more securely to the school we shall not forget? Looking back from the open door of the present, upon the outstretched past, which is really typical of ourselves, as we unchangeably are, it is hard to say farewell. We are loath to take this new step whatever it may mean for us.

The latter misty way is the future. Uncertainty is imbedded in its filmy depths. Our only feeling toward it is one of wondering inquiry. But Time is impatient. His sands will not cease to flow. Anyhow, there is nothing in the future for cowards, he says. He is blind and merciless to our heartfelt sentiments as his hand goads us onward. It is not for us to loiter on the threshold, but we must go on and on. Prepared with the strength of knowledge and the weapons of truth and faith which our foster-mother has given, we must go to unravel hidden mysteries, to seek that which waits for us.

Such is our condition of mind. The past is behind us, sweet and unforgettable. The future looms up before us, immense and perplexing. The present, at this time, is of great moment. It is really the meeting place of childhood and manhood. We must lay aside the happy character of boyhood and step into the world of men. It is not easy to say whether we are content with our position, but that is not of our choosing. So let our first step as men be a manly one. With faith in God, in mankind, and in self, let us step into the future with an unfaltering step, unafraid. Of course, the feelings that foster our regret can not be forgotten, but we need not take leave of all that is dear to us. We will no longer be students in the Rochester Catholic High School when this vital word is spoken, but we may continue to show our affection and fealty as alumni, working in the world to the credit of her name. So we must say farewell to the delightful and wholesome association with our Alma Mater, to the teachers and priests whose indefatigable labors have made us indebted to them beyond all hope of repayment, and to the fellow students we leave behind. Vale, one and all, and may God's favor ever be with you.

Senior Academic Class

Senior Academic History

N THIS short class history are chronicled the chief accomplishments of the Class of 1915 in the four short years of its existence. In it we have likewise endeavored to show the mental, moral and physical strength of the class as a whole and the special characteristics of some of the individual members. The young men and women whose deeds are herein recorded are now standing on the threshold of the future and are about to set out, we hope, "to become leaders in Israel". May this record of the past four years act as an incentive to "greater things" and may the sunshine of God's favor fall upon them in the future as it has in the past.

Chapter I

N OUR little sphere, the year 1911 is chiefly noted for two things—our graduation from the grammar schools and our entrance into the Rochester Catholic High School. How ever unimportant these events may seem to others, to us, the Class of 1915, they are all-important, marking as they do, the beginning of our course in secondary education. This course is now nearing completion, and we hasten, before it is too late, to record in history the chief events of the past four years.

On September 8, 1911, the R. C. H. S. first opened its doors to us. We entered the school young, happy, unconscious of the troubles before us and yet fully conscious that we were to assume that much despised title "Freshmen." In a few days, however, we had become fully initiated members of the school and had become acquainted with every student from the best known Senior to the lowliest fellow classmen.

The first year is but a faint memory to most of us now. It was at this time that the world first read of those mystic heroes of the prolific pen of Gerard Maier—the never-to-be-forgotten Pete and Bill. Gerard's compositions gave to English that literary tone which all were striving after. We also became acquainted with the mysterious mazes of algebra, Latin and biology, and came more and more to respect the upper classmen who had passed safely through the difficulties with which we were contending. The days passed so rapidly that almost before we realized it, June was upon us with the dreaded examinations. Most of us stood the tests fairly well and we left school for the vacation with every determination to do even better the following year.

Chapter II

Our return to school in September, 1912, was greatly saddened by the death of one of our most beloved classmates, gentle, respected Felix Wahl. He was taken away suddenly, and on the day previous to the reopening of school, so that it seemed as if a dark pall had fallen over all of us, in spite of the joy of reunion. Felix was with us but one short year, but his memory is still fresh in the hearts of all of his fellow classmen.

In exactly two and one-half days we were all ardently wishing that we were back in the old days of '11-'12 when such simple things as algebra and biology were studied. In their places we found geometry and Caesar and to say the least it was by no means a fair exchange. Theorem VII in geometry and the march of Caesar to the Sequani seemed like the very refinement of cruel torture and we all thought ourselves the most prosecuted of all humans. Happy to say however, none were overcome, and we soon began to look wise and pretend that we knew what our learned teachers were talking about.

William Schmitt, that great example of school lunch cooking, went out for the basketball team and naturally made it. In baseball we were well represented by Louis Whitman and many others. Our literary light, the renowned Harold Harris, began to carve for himself a name in the school hall of fame. In Caesar the name of Honora Miller resounded, and in the study hall the names of Oster, Schmitt, Griffin and Whitman began to resound with alarming frequency. Before we knew it, June was again upon us with its accompanying examinations, ball games and class rushes. Finally we came to the night of the closing exercises, congratulated those graduating and separated for a well earned three month's respite.

Chapter III

It is said that the older we grow, the harder trials we have to overcome, and with respect to high school we certainly found this saying to be true. We now encountered physics, the most dreaded and still most interesting of all subjects, and Latin and German in their more flagrant forms. In a very short time some of the problems in physics became veritable nightmares to all of us. There is no doubt that we liked the subject and the teacher and in a short time we came to feel that we were getting a hold of things. Our new German teacher made her native tongue as clear to us as our own, while in English and the histories we felt very much at home. In recognition of true worth, a Junior was elected to fill the office of basketball captain and William soon began to demonstrate that he had the power to make others obey him implicitly. Under his direction the greatest basketball team to date was welded together and it made a remarkable record. Among the stars of the team were Louis Langie and Louis Whitman, who were invaluable aids both in passwork and in shooting. For the first time in the history of the school a hockey team was started with Vincent Grady as captain and Louis Langie manager, and a very creditable record. The baseball team under the direction of Louis Whitman also gained many victories.

Late in April the Seniors challenged the Juniors to a debate, little reckoning what a host they were challenging. Louis Langie, Raymond Maier and John Martin were selected to represent the class of '15, and so nobly did they acquit themselves that the decision was almost unanimous in their favor. From then until the close of the year, the class gained no more laurels, seeming to conserve its energies for the great and glorious Senior year.

Chapter IV

Now that we were Seniors it did not seem to be such a wonderful thing as we had imagined. We breathed the same, studied less, if anything, and were lectured as vociferously as in former years. A great change had taken place in the school, in that Reverend Father Muckle had been appointed superintendent of the high school. This was a great step forward, inasmuch as the school was growing rapidly and needed the entire attention of one man. In Father Muckle was secured a man entirely capable of filling the position, and one who always works in our interest.

The "Student" now came under our control, and never was it more capably handled than by the well known editor-in-chief. It grew and prospered throughout the entire year, culminating in an excellent athletic issue.

It was really no wonder that an athletic issue was put out, as the basketball, hockey, track and baseball teams all made excellent records, the baseball team accomplishing the unheard-of by beating East High.

The trip of the basketball team and its followers to Canandaigua will never be forgotten by the many Senior participants. It was one of the most enjoyable things of the entire year, and Leo Foley and Raymond Griffin, the engineers of the trip, deserve great credit for the excellent way in which the entire affair was managed.

Upon our return to school after the Christmas holidays we were greatly shocked to find that Father Keenan, our beloved science teacher, had been taken away from us. This was an immense surprise, because for some reason, Father Keenan and the R. C. H. S. had come to be synonymous terms to most of us. While sorrowing in our loss we all rejoiced in his advancement and his memory will always be revered by this year's Senior Class.

In March we held the annual Senior debate in which the participants made a very creditable showing.

The time is fast approaching when we shall no longer exist as a class in the R. C. H. S. What the future will bring us we know not. We are not afraid to set out as we have a knowledge of what is right and the purpose to do it. We are grateful to those who have done so much for us and we trust that future years will prove to them that the seeds they sowed in the hearts of the members of 1915 will be productive of much fruit.

Senior Commercial Class

Senior Commercial Class History

THE GREAT EVENT of our school life is accomplished. After two years of patient effort we have at last attained the goal at which we aimed—the reward of application to our studies—graduation. Although, perhaps, we were not as diligent as we might have been, and often looked at the jocose side of our work, rather than the serious, yet we felt the responsibility that would devolve upon us at the outset of our careers as stenographers; and this thought, one of mingled fear and anxiety, spurred us on. Nor was our way all a smooth one. Neither few nor easily surmountable were the stumbling blocks which beset us in our field of labor; but we have overcome them all and won the final victory in our school work. And now, before we bid farewell to our Alma Mater, let us turn back a few pages in the annals of time and glance at the happy days we spent in the R. C. H. S.

When the school bell sent out its loud, clear tones, September 1913, it was answered by a happy group of boys and girls, representatives of almost every parish in the city as well as the surrounding villages and towns. We were unsophisticated yet self-reliant Freshmen at our first entrance into the school; but how quickly this feeling changed into one of chagrin at our very ignorance, when we encountered in the halls the sedate and dignified Seniors, and hoped that we would soon fill their envied places. Shall we ever forget the struggle with those intricate shorthand notes? It is said that it takes a wise father to know his own child, and I doubt that Mr. Pitman would recognize the characters made by our reluctant fingers. Now, as we, in contemplation, view them, we smile at what appears to be a cross between Chinese script and a child's first writing lesson. Ah, then comes bookkeeping—many times we were completely lost under the debris of ledgers and blanks. And while typewriting was not exactly a recreation, still we took a peculiar delight (as in everything forbidden) in watching the play of keys and fingers. But those days of happiness and labor passed all too soon and too quickly did we obtain the appellation "Seniors".

What pleasant memories are ours when our thoughts go back to our last year! Shall we not confess to a feeling of exultation at having the underclassmen look up to us as the most worthy objects of their homage? And how we tried to act the dignified role, to be worthy of that most honored title and most of all to reach the high standard of our predecessors! But the fearful thought comes to me as I write—have we failed in these respects?

Our Senior year will ever be one of fondest memories, for it was during this year, with proud and happy hearts, that we welcomed Rev. Father Muckle into our midst. How faithfully he worked with us, trying to inspire each with the desire to lead a true and noble life. As a slight recompense and token of our gratitude to all our teachers, for their labor and love among us, we shall strive, while fulfilling our duties in the world, to prove all times and we shall thus show them that their teaching has not been in ourselves valiant defenders of our religion by honoring and practicing it at vain. May we ever remember the lessons they have taught us, not only by word, but by example.

Class of 1916

History of the Class of 1916

READERS of this volume, turn not this page until you have read every word inscribed hereon, for however loath we may be to sing our own praises (and modesty is our chief virtue) we have been prevailed upon to record our deeds, that Sophomores and others may profit by our example.

To most of you no doubt, the razing of a mountain and the attempting to fill a valley with the material gained therefrom would seem Utopian,—the dream of a Visionary. And yet, figuratively speaking, this is precisely what the class of 1916 has done. And we have gone even farther. Upon finding that our valley was too deep to be filled by one mountain or even two, we attacked a third and even now that third is almost leveled. Close at hand we see another mount, the statliest of the group, whose glory we do propose to make our own.

This, friends, is the valley of our mind, deep and empty when we came, replenished by mountains of learning and truth and still deep enough to accommodate that king of peaks, our Senior year.

How delighted we were to come here in the first place! How relieved to surrender the despised appellation of "Freshmen" to newer arrivals! What pleasure the recollections of Sophomore days bring to us and finally how glad we are to be Juniors!

For it is as Juniors that we have been able to reach out and take to ourselves the honors which awaited us. Debating has brought out eighteen orators, strong in voice and in argument whose declamations have caused the "Sophs" to sit in wide-eyed wonderment and made even the staid Seniors pause awhile and listen.

All student activities feel the uplifting influence of our presence. Athletics, the "Student," debating and what not are replete with Juniors. Basketball is our banner sport, ten of our class taking part. Baseball and track claim their share of our attention with the result that we are well represented in those sports. The "Student," the pride of every pupil of this school is now under our tutelage. Watch it grow!

But even while we are writing this, time and space bid us to make an end of this self adulation. And truly we ourselves are impatient to lay down our pen which but records past deeds and to take up our weapons and conquer new fields. The title of Seniors, looms up before us; we would fain grasp it but another hand is on it. However, the hand that grasps it now is slowly losing its hold and when at last the prize is ours, then shall we clothe ourselves with the dignity and grandeur of our rank and then shall we set forth to explore and conquer fields and spheres that as yet are unknown to us.

J. K. Dower, '16.

Class of 1917

CERTAINLY, it was an eventful day for the Rochester Catholic High School, when the class of 1917 entered its halls that bright, balmy, September day of 1913. About eighty pupils of all sizes and mental capacity, from every parish in the city and surrounding towns, responded to the monotonous call of the old school bell. Often had we heard vivid and glowing accounts of the gay life of the high school student. Experience, however, soon taught us otherwise, when we began to study Latin conjugations and declensions, and to encounter the almost insoluble problems of algebra. But, with all our difficulties, we managed to pass the June exams,—the exams that made us dignified Sophomores.

Indeed, this is our "Suffermore Year." With Geometry, Caesar, English and German, French or History to battle, we are having no easy time. If I said anything against Algebra, I retract it in favor of Geometry, for its conglomeration of lines, curves, and angles, with the mysteries contained therein, is enough to give anyone chronic headache. But, with Jacob Schmitt, Howard FitzGerald, John Temmerman, and a few others to guide us o'er the intricate paths, we shall give a safe transit.

So far, we have been able to follow Caesar through the three parts of Gaul, almost without crutches. But, with such as Gerald Ashe, Howard Fitz Gerald, and Robert Abel, to help us along, we ought to be able to keep up with him.

Were I to tell you everything about our English classes, all that I could write could not be contained in this volume. For almost a half year, we wrote, or rather, tried to write beautiful (?) scenes, narrations and expositions for these classes. Through the strenuous efforts of teachers and pupils, we undoubtedly, have made a success of it. Not only in writing but also in debating have the Sophs proven their ability. During the term several interesting debates on vital questions of the day, were given by the chosen teams. By the present prospects, it looks as though we are going to have some debaters for the next two years.

Some of us took German, some French and others history. So, it was difficult to tell how we were getting along in these subjects. But, when we heard of Messieurs Tierney, Gottery and Curran, trying to "jabber" like true Parisians (?), and when we heard those, whose names sound anything but German, trying to speak like the real Teuton, we perceived that some one was trying to master a modern tongue.

But, not only in mental ability, but also in athletics, have the Sophs proven themselves unexcelled. During the past season, a basket ball team, called "The Cathedral Midgets," made up almost entirely of Sophomores has won an enviable record on the court, defeating some of the fastest local quints of their size.

Although I'm afraid I have not done justice to our famous class, time and space will not allow me to continue, but before closing this history, let us drink a toast—grape juice of course—to the success of the class of Nineteen hundred seventeen.

Academic Class 1918

Academic Class of 1918

N A BEAUTIFUL DAY in September, 1914, about seventy Freshmen, eager to begin academic work, assembled in the study hall of the Rochester Catholic High School. Among the seventy were representatives from nearly every school in the city as well as many surrounding towns. Canandaigua contributed to our happiness by sending us "Witty" Tom who amuses us greatly with his jokes and witticisms.

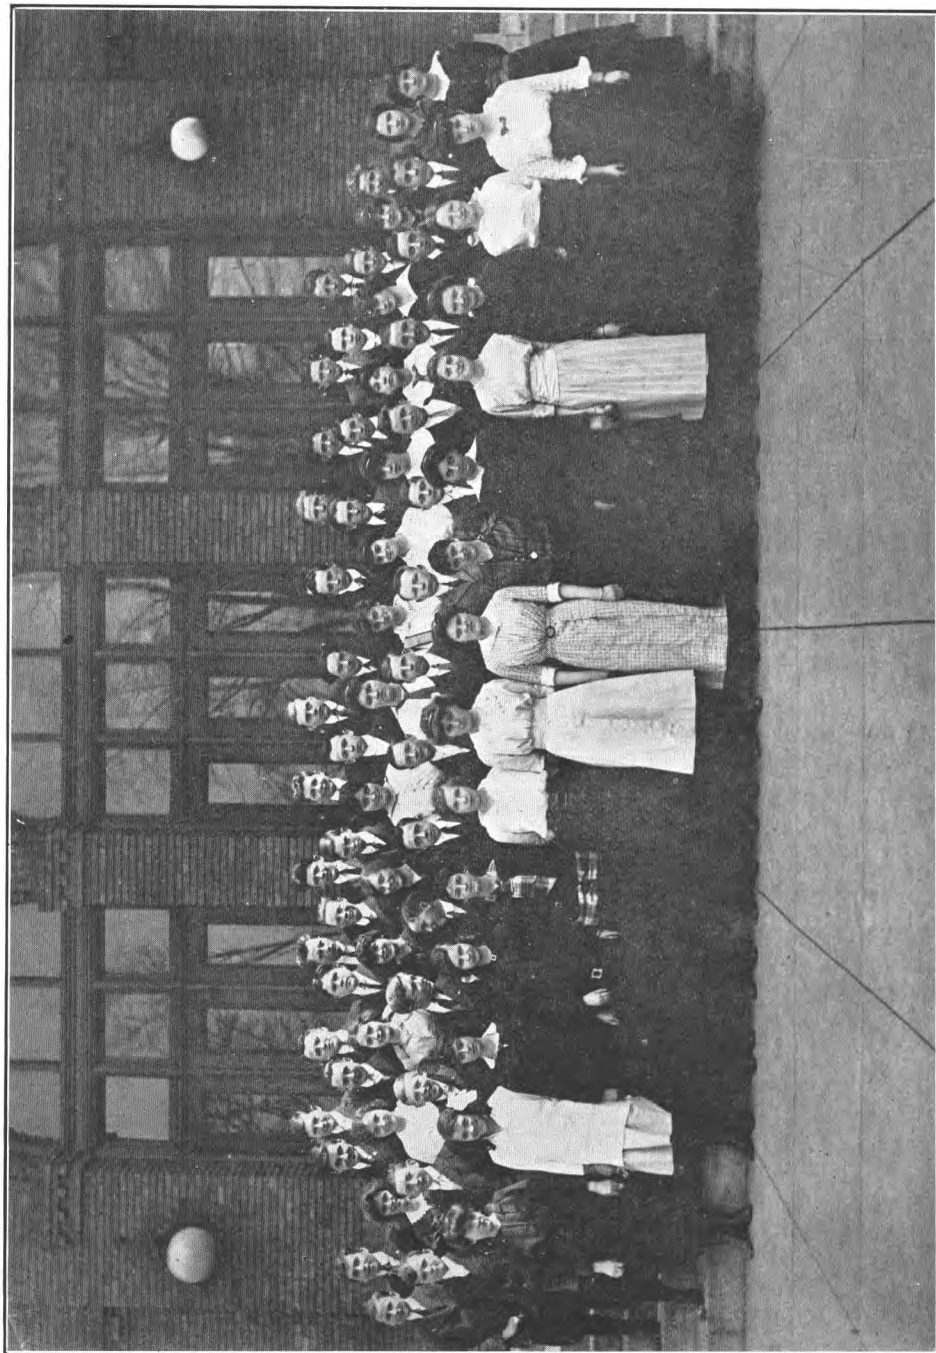

At the beginning of the year we thought the Freshman course easy but as time went on we found it harder. Indeed we soon realized the truth of the saying, "when one begins to think he knows nothing, he is just beginning to know something."

It was always a great pleasure for us to listen to "Allie" Lockwood, James Tuite, Helen White, Herbert Dietz, Casimir Balcerak and Ladislaus Szczepanski sing off the declensions, conjugations and syntax in Latin. But Teresa Ryan, Harold McCabe, Marie Corrigan, Marion Haley, John McDonnell and William Brennan always come to the rescue in solving problems in algebra. We must not forget either to mention our scientific men, Joseph Callahan, Francis Strauss and Elliott Clossey who will no doubt favor us some day with some wonderful discoveries.

Our most prominent men on the athletic field were McKenna who is so fast at baseball that he falls all over himself, Tuite, who can beat the hop-toads playing basketball, Bohrer who tries to brush the cobwebs off the sky by his jumping and Hefferman who spends the last two periods of the school day session trying to cool himself off after the violent exertions of the free period.

However, we have all made some progress and we feel that something towards the good of our future has been accomplished. We are glad to have been members of the Freshman class of the Rochester Catholic High School and we hope to pass the Regents' tests in June and come back next September with the well-earned title, "Sophomores."

First Year Commercial Class

First Year Commercial

THE SEPTEMBER of 1914 marked the beginning of a worthy struggle whose finale will no doubt sound the note of success in the June examinations.

In enumerating the participants in this intellectual warfare, we will give every man his due. We owe, in a measure, our progress to the charmed power of "Shrimp" Gabel, the young canary who sings like an angel. Next, we have with us, "Chubby" Brown, the light of whose presence fell upon us shortly after the Christmas holidays. Then comes a certain fat man, by name, "Tim" Collins who breaks on an average of three chairs a week to say nothing of the windows in the back of the room. After him follows the world's baseball wonder Cecil Crelly and his mate the sainted Roger Courneen. The spirit of diligence permeates our sphere by virtue of the presence of "Russ" O'Neil, George Collins and Milton Graham. We rise in fear of the terrible man-eating bear, "Bruno" Burnett who is rivalled by that towering piece of humanity, Frank Schenk. We have a worth-naming curiosity, "Skinny" Spiegel who is minus a shadow and also a born actor in the person of "Beans" Mayer who has the dramatic quality of producing a headache when exams come around. We are blessed with the presence of Leon Mack who according to Father Muckle has lost part of his name. "Li'l Frank" Thomy the two thousand pounder has a large space in both our company and consideration; likewise Elmer Bleier the squeaky-voiced one and "Wandering Jew" Schalk. Our "Bern" Lambert is famed for his ability to talk at a Roosevelt-rate and also does "Brush-cut" Hasenauer, he who has an hour to do anything, share in popularity. To the cause of athletics we have contributed the well-known citizens, Ray Lewis, manager of the reserve basketball team and John Finucane of the Midgets. To the orchestra, we gave our Julius Schenk, one grand musician. Our femininity, composed of LeNoir Hurley, Verona Uhl, Lois Greenwood, Helen, McCarthy, Margaret Lake, and Genevieve Filippone, is sweeter for its lack of number.

In room three, there are some noted personages such as William Naylor the basketball star and Francis Magin another curiosity who has a knack of finishing his work before the others have fairly begun. There are also Lorenz the "Orful Boy" and Eugene Schwartz the great soprano singer, and Carl Hammond and William Keeler who expect to pass, but—Tom O'Leary says he is German but a second glance at his name settles our doubts and Carl Winterroth is "not a bad boy when he is sleeping." Herbert Erb seems to have lost a part of his name in some conflict and Walter Connors hails as a baseball star of such a reputation that we expect to see his name in the line-up of the Boston Braves in years to come.

Three girls, Loretta Ryan, Helen Watson and Monica Moffett are doing some good work in shorthand and we expect great results from them in the June exams. Mildred Bertru, Margaret Flanagan and Marguerite Galbraith are very fond of red ink and expect to become expert book-keepers in years hence.

These are the reputations that have been attached to some of the names enrolled in the Freshman Commercial class of the nineteen fifteen school year and we call it a fair beginning. However, much more will be added to this next year when most of us will be finally prepared to launch out successfully into the business world, where, we hope, our history will be as joyous and as free from blemish as this, the annals of a very happy and eventful year.

Good-bye Class-day, good-bye!
We have so loved you, but we cannot hold you,
Departing like a dream the shadows fold you;
Slowly your perfect beauty fades away,
Good-bye Class-day.

Good-bye Class-day, good-bye!
Dear were your hours of regal splendor,
Sadly we yield to the evening tender,
You were so fair from your first morning ray,
Good-bye Class-day.

Good-bye Class-day good-bye!
All your rich gifts our grateful hearts remember,
The while we watch your sunset's smoldering ember
Die in the west beneath the twilight gray,
Good-bye Class-day.

The Senior Girls

Nature's choicest blossoms, "seven in all," you say,
Seven lovely flowers in their colors gay;
Sweet with their fragrance, wet with dew,
Seven lovely flowers in the garden grew.

The first one a rose of the deepest red,
A rose with velvet petals, "queen of all" they said;
Not proudly conscious of her high-born place,
But ever retaining kind nature's simple "Grace".

Close to the rose, with meekly joyful eyes,
All undisturbed and tranquil as the skies,
Two modest violets, untouched by wordly pride,
"Flora's" sweetest pleasure near "Nora" to abide.

The pink of devotion and Easter lily fair,
These were the "Helens" of the garden rare;
One clothed in soft tints, the other in white,
Each lent the charm of her presence bright.

Then in the center, in colors of gold,
A chrys "An" themum was seen its bright petals to unfold;
While not far distant, all modest in attire,
Bloomed a tall "Mary"-gold that heavenward did aspire.

Seven lovely flowers in their colors gay
Are destined to bloom in other fields to-day;
O may they ever a sweet fragrance diffuse,
And naught of their charm or innocence lose.

Spring

She was a sprightly radiant creature, graceful, elusive;
Her garments were flowing—borne on the breeze;
Her grace—the motion of swaying trees;
Her hair—the mist of a golden-head flower;
Her eyes—the witchery of a twilight hour,
Deeper than water's hue,
Brighter than heaven's blue,
Delight, joy and youth therein,
Not e'en a shadowy knowledge of sin.
I grasped at her!
Taking fright, flight and wing—
She was gone!
I had lost the Spring.

The End of Our High School Days

(Air—A Perfect Day.)

When we come to the end of our high-school days,
And we sit alone with our thoughts,
And our hearts are sad as we go away,
From the school dear where we've been taught;
Do you think what the end of our high-school days
Will mean to each longing heart,
When we come to the dividing of the ways
And, dear classmates, have to part?

Well, this is the end of our high-school days,
And we start on a journey new,
But we carry hopes that are bright and fair
And the wish of our teachers true.
For memory will bring back those high-school days,
With scenes dear to every heart,
Though we find at the end of our high-school days,
From it all we now must part.

Alma Mater

(Air—Comrade's Parting Song)

Loved Alma Mater,
How can we from thee part!
Thou only hast our hearts,
Where e'er we stray.
Thy counsel kind and true,
Oft will our love renew,
As we life's work pursue
From year to year.

Loved Alma Mater,
Thy name is ever dear,
Thy mem'ry we'll revere
'Till life is o'er;
And should this world bestow
On us great gifts, we know
How all to thee we owe
For counsel wise.

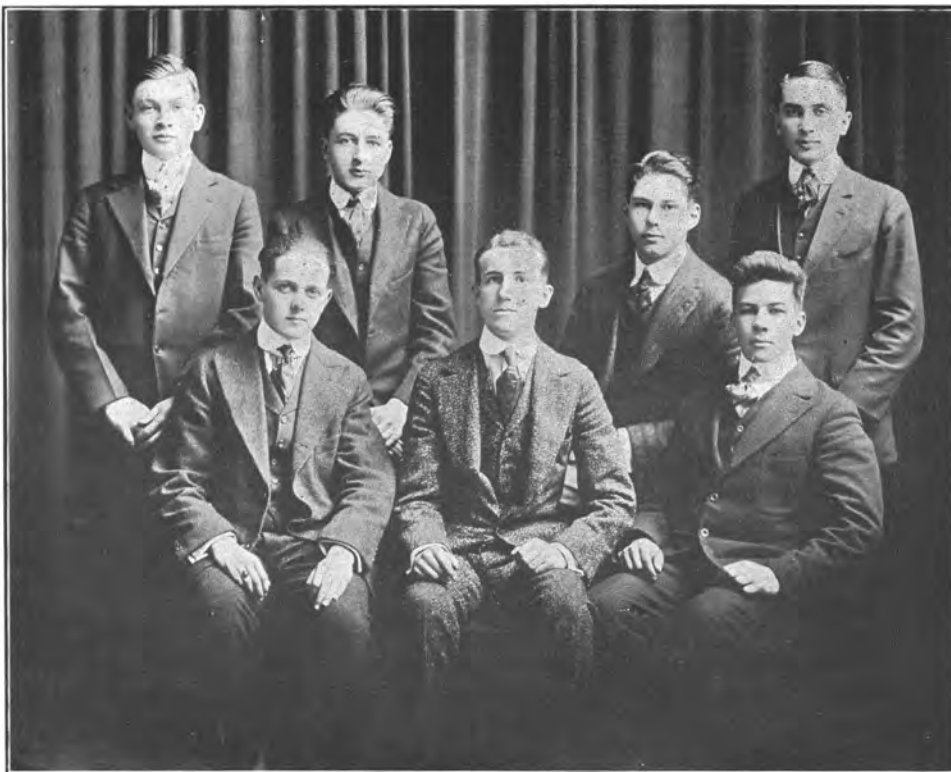

Honora Miller, '15.

In making any enumeration of the activities of Nineteen Fifteen in the school, one should not fail to consider the important art of debating. The efficiency of this department of activity being generally acknowledged, it must be said that the Senior class, and also the under classes, have reaped largely of its fruits.

The first time any public appearance was made by these debaters, was last year, when, as Juniors, Louis Langie, Raymond Maier and John Martin very forcibly convinced three wise Seniors that the Monroe Doctrine should not be abolished.

It was not easy, however beneficial, for their classmates to maintain the standard they had set. In March, 1915, a very good debate was held in the study hall. The subject for discussion was the feasibility of the establishment by the United States of a more extensive system of shipping subsidies. The negative and victorious team was composed of Neil Collins, William O'Keefe and Harold Harris. William Franey, Elmer O'Brien and Clarence Sturmer crowded them very closely with arguments in favor of the affirmative side of the question, so the debate was interesting and well-received.

Several noteworthy debates were also held by the Juniors and Sophomores, but a great furore was caused when the seven Junior girls came forward with an excellent debate on Woman Suffrage. It was a grand success and the young ladies are to be highly complimented on the way they handled the subject. Helen Egan acted as chairman (or woman?) while the affirmative side was comprised of Armada Hurley, Modwena Jones and Loretta Ryan, with Beulah Watkins, Bessie Donovan and Gertrude Sheehan as their negative opponents.

There is no activity of our school life more worthy of being fostered and encouraged than the art of debating. Its effects are great and many. At present everything is being done to encourage the students to make themselves proficient in this art, and it is hoped that sometime in the future the name of our school may be represented in interscholastic forums.

The Orchestra

The Orchestra

F ITS ORCHESTRA the school may be justly proud. Under the capable direction of Professor Dousek, it has developed a standard of efficiency and skill that is worthy of commendation. None of the players being professionals this proficiency has been attained only by hard and continued efforts upon the part of the players and the exercise of much perseverance and patience by the director. It was only as a result of their combined effort that precision of time, unity and harmony of effect were produced and the orchestra was brought to its present high standard.

The orchestra has assisted at many functions, not only in connection with the school, but outside as well.

The following students are regular members: Gerald Drum, '15, piano; Julius Schenk, '16, Delbert Predmore, '16, Charles Oster, '15, Joseph Loder, '16, Leo LaPalm, '18, James Tuite, '18, violins; Harold Bohrer, '18 and George Burkhardt, '18, cornets; Francis Strauss, '18, clarinet; Donald Stupp, '18, drums.

The school orchestra is an organization that should be encouraged just as much as any other department of the outside work of the school. There is almost always some talent in the school and in bringing it out, a service is done to the individuals as well as to the school. Every organization of this sort tends to carry the name of the school a little farther into the outside world, so that in time, there will be more than a privileged few to know of the existence and caliber of the Rochester Catholic High School.

Farewell to Alma Mater

(Air—"Juanita")

Dear Alma Mater,
Parting's hour is drawing nigh;
Ne'er shall we falter,
As we say good-bye.
'Neath thy care so tender
Fruitful years have blithely sped,
And the days of splendor
All too soon have fled.

Chorus:

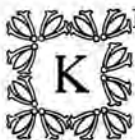

Farewell, farewell,
Alma Mater ere we part,
Farewell, farewell,
From our loyal hearts.

Honor and glory
Ever crown thy gracious name,
Long live the story
Of thy children's fame.
Wilt thou not in sadness
For thine absent children sigh,
And recall the gladness
Of the days gone by.

Will of the Class of 1915

NOW ALL MEN by these presents that we, the class of nineteen fifteen of the Rochester Catholic High School, in the city of Rochester, County of Monroe, State of New York, being in full possession of all mental requisites and realizing that we are about to leave this terrestrial sphere of trials and tribulations, do make and publish this, our last will and testament.

Article 1—To our Reverend Superintendent we give and bequeath our thanks for past favors and our best wishes for continued success in the management of the Rochester Catholic High School.

Article 2—We give and bequeath to our respected and beloved teachers, our most earnest gratitude for their kind and patient labors in our behalf during the past four years, to which labors we owe whatever success we may have attained.

Article 3—To our worthy successors, the class of nineteen sixteen, we give and bequeath the following piece of advice: "Never tackle a Freshman who is unknown to you as he may be a fighter."

Article 4—To the class of nineteen seventeen we give and bequeath the hard knocks which we have received, with the hope that said class of nineteen seventeen will profit thereby.

Article 5—We give and bequeath to the Freshman class, our best wishes for success. We think that this is sufficiently liberal as the Sophomores will probably pass on the hard knocks which we have devised to them.

Article 6—To the school as a whole, we leave an example which it will be difficult for succeeding classes to follow.

Article 7—And all the rest and residue of our estate together with any estate or right to glories which we may attain after the date of execution of this instrument, we give and devise to the following members of the Junior class:

Article 8—The remarkable facility for extricating himself from difficulties which up to the present time has been held by William O'Keefe, we give and bequeath to Charles Burke. It is understood that Mr Burke is to retain possession of this very convenient facility only as long as he continues to make proper use of it. In case of failure on his part to do this, it is to revert to Mr. O'Keefe, who will in all probability need it after the June examinations.

Article 9—The sweet simplicity of expression and mildness of manner belonging to Gerald McLean, we give and bequeath to Louis Klee.

Article 10—Paul Keating's seat in the study hall we give and bequeath to George Butler. We would deem it a special favor if "Wireless George" would leave the weird markings on the desk untouched. This is to demonstrate to posterity that we have at least one genius in the class.

Article 11—Edward Henahan's powers in Latin translation, we give and devise to Alfred Finnegan.

Article 12—Mr. Schmitt's quaint humor and unassuming ways, we give and bequeath to Joseph Mayer.

Article 13—Louis Whitman's physical powers we give and bequeath to Russel Hanna. In case that Mr. Hanna is in doubt as to the exact nature of these powers, it may be well for him to remember that Mr. Whitman is a member of the track team.

Article 14—Vincent Grady's chemical skill we give and bequeath to Carl Muenzen. But Mr. Muenzen is to wait until we shall have departed before he gives free reign to this skill as we can not stand very many more of those thunderous explosions and sweet-smelling concoctions.

Article 15—We give and bequeath Louis Langie's powers of oratory to George Growney who is to use them in defense of the argument for a longer Easter vacation.

Article 16—To Philip Hafner we give and devise Elmer O'Brien's perfect manners and bearing.

Article 17—We appoint the faculty of R. C. H. S. to be sole executor of this our last will and testament.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hand and seal, this, the 25th day of May in the Year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fifteen,

CLASS OF NINETEEN FIFTEEN (l. s.)

William Franey, Testator.

Signed, sealed and declared to be the last will and testament by the testator of the class of 1915, in the presence of us, who at their request, and in their presence and the presence of each other, have hereunto set our names as witnesses this the twenty-fifth day of May, Year of Our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen.

The Basketball Team

Nineteen Fifteen in Athletics

INETEEN FIFTEEN has been the banner year in athletics as well as in other things. During the past school year the name of the Rochester Catholic High School—better known, perhaps, as Cathedral—has taken an approaching step, longer than in other years, toward the popularity it deserves. Hitherto, athletic activity has been confined almost entirely to basketball, but this year, maroon-garbed teams have met with notable successes in almost every division of the athletic calendar, so that in the awarding of interscholastic titles in this vicinity nowadays, the name of Cathedral is bound to be a formidable factor. Basketball, track, hockey, baseball and tennis comprise principally this year's field of competition and at this stage of the season it is gratifying to know that none of these teams has met with any flagrant failure, while most of them have reached the apex of success. But, one blot had come onto our athletic escutcheon and that now has been partially erased. This year's slogan seems to have been "to beat East High", for that is the ambition of many of our teams. In basketball East High gave our boys the only beating they accepted on our own court and we were forced to acknowledge their cleverness; in the only indoor meet which our track team entered, East High again carried off the honors, but in hockey, in the principal game with this sturdy rival, the game ended with a tie score, and in baseball against the Oriental nine, the portion we enjoyed was complete victory. Outdoor track and tennis, with their results are, at this writing, still forthcoming, but we need have no great fears, for material is plentiful and training should produce a splendid foundation whereon we may build our confidence. So, athletics in our school in nineteen fifteen have, more than ever before, been a great success. Excellent records have been made and it may now be said that all the teams representing the Rochester Catholic High School are fully capable of upholding the exalted name of that institution—thanks to Nineteen Fifteen!

Basketball

It speaks well for the advancement of the school and its reputation to say that the season just past is the most successful ever when basketball is principal among the sports encouraged in our school. Out of seventeen games played, only three were lost, two of which were played on foreign courts. The only game lost on our home court (O bitter pill!) was that memorable battle with East High School, which was, without a doubt, the most interesting game ever played in Cathedral hall. The only other team to wrest a victory from "Our Pride" was the noted quint of the Geneseo Normal School, the remaining victory being claimed by East High on its own court. Among the long list of worthy opponents whom our team defeated are: West High School, Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, Pittsford, Canandaigua Academy (one of the few teams to beat East High), East Rochester, Alumni, Dansville and Waterloo. This is a record of which any high school team need be duly proud.

The season began with four of last year's regulars, Schmitt, Quigley, Whitman and Wattle, and Langie and Grady of last year's second team and the prospect for another winning five seemed appreciably bright. Fate smiled on the destiny of the team, when before much time had passed a basketball find was unearthed in the person of Harold Clark, who was picked as the fifth man. Later in the season Leo Waring returned to school and in placing him at center the team received its finishing touch and was complete, a combination which will not soon be forgotten in local athletic circles.

So, we have reviewed the record which has caused the team of nineteen fifteen to become a memorable part of high school history. It is a team worthy of all the praise we can give it and the name it possesses through its record is as good as championship.

Baseball

Never before has baseball been so well received in the school as this year. Business-like organization brought enthusiasm, and enthusiasm is a big factor in any sort of athletics. The first call for recruits brought forth a good and extensive field to pick from. The team finally picked could hardly be improved upon. There was only one drawback: we had everything but a pitcher. While everyone shook their heads over this dilemma, someone repeated the old slogan "the 'Redhead' can do it" and someone else took up the cry. As a result Quigley added another to his list of accomplishments, becoming a pitcher, and now he is rated with the best of twirlers, a "phenom".

The Basketball Reserves

The baseball team is really a combination of the best of local amateur and semi-pro players. Quigley, Whitman and Leicht top the mound to perfection, Schmitt catches, Schlotzer, Langie, Brown and Captain Burke complete the infield, while Clark, Kelly, Drumm and Colston fill the outfield. Quite a team, we should say—demons at hitting and wizards in the field. One can hardly wonder that the students are backing it.

Even at the very outset one might call the baseball season a complete success. The first game alone satisfied everyone that the team is worthy of all our confidence. Before the public, at baseball park, East High received such a trouncing at our hands that we may easily forget what happened in basketball.

But at this writing, the season is still young. Several games will be played, and it is expected that not only will baseball be a success, but it will also be at least self-supporting. Let us remember then, that in nineteen fifteen something notable was done in baseball as well as in the many other activities.

Hockey

This year's hockey season gave that sport a position in the athletics of the school which it has never before been able to earn. Several games were played with very formidable opponents, the bitterest enemy being East High School. The principal game with this septette was very evenly contested and ended in a tie. When we consider that sickness and accidents kept the team in an almost constantly crippled condition, we should call the hockey season a most successful one.

The principal honors for the success of the team, of course, go to Captain Langie and Manager Grady, whose unceasing efforts placed the team in its present rank. For the strength of the team we may thank "Ed" Henehan, "Art" Hocter, "Eddie" Connolly, Gerald McLean, Leo Foley and Leo Simmons. They worked hard to produce fruits in a new field and we could hardly hope for greater success than they earned.

Track

Track prospects also this year are exceptionally bright. Last year's activities gave this sport a firm foothold in the school and the coming to our school of "Dick" Baker, former captain of West High, and Leo Simmons, a distance man of note, gave a promising nucleus for a good team. Several new men worth watching have been brought to the front and there is no reason why the insignia of R. C. H. S. can not be carried as far to the front in track as in other activities. On account of lack of practice the indoor season was not wonderfully successful but enthusiasm warrants that a different story will be told on the open cinder paths.

Manager Fred Collins has entered the team in many large meets and he promises that at the end of the season our record in track will at least be altered appreciably.

Tennis

Last year there was quite a tennis team in the school, but no one ever heard much about it. This year things should be different. Wolfe Heinrich has been appointed captain and William Franey manager of the team and a number of matches have been scheduled. This sport is very popular in some schools and since we have players of no small ability in the school we expect that this year's tennis season will be a good one.

From the number of subscriptions received, they are assured of the cooperation of a devoted, loyal Alumni in any undertaking in the interests of Alma Mater.

Wit and Humor

German teacher—"Now William, how far away were you from the correct answer of the fourth question?"

Schmitt—"Only two seats."

Coniff—Say "Jeremiah! I never can remember the ages of my own brothers. Can you?"

O'Connor—"Sure! I don't seem to have the slightest trouble in that line. Let me see—Andrew, the eldest was born 1999 years after the murder of Caesar; Donald, 2123 years after Tiberius Graulius entered Rome; Ebenezer, 1966 years after Caractacus was defeated; Leopold, 2225 years after Antiochus burned Jerusalem; Timothy, 2432 years after Cambyzes conquered Egypt, etc., etc."

Judge—"Well sir, are you guilty of violating the speed ordinance, or not?"

Thomy—"Your honor, I think I am guilty but I'd like to be tried to make sure."

Griffin—"Say, what's that fellow staring at me for?"

Sturmer—"Oh! That's Professor Jones, the famous expert on insanity."

Whitman—"Do you think Germany could lick the United States?"

Murphy—"Sure, if they would keep all the Irishmen out of the fray."

Erbland—"What's the trouble here, anyway?"

O'Keefe (moaning and gnashing teeth)—"Hey, Erbland, your old dog there, bit me in the leg."

Erbland—"What do you think he'd do, bite you in the neck?"

The Boys of Fifteen

O storied verse of far-reaching fame,
To-night to your annals add one lustrous name;
Let your bards gather close round the table to hear
The wonderful deeds of Fifteen so dear.

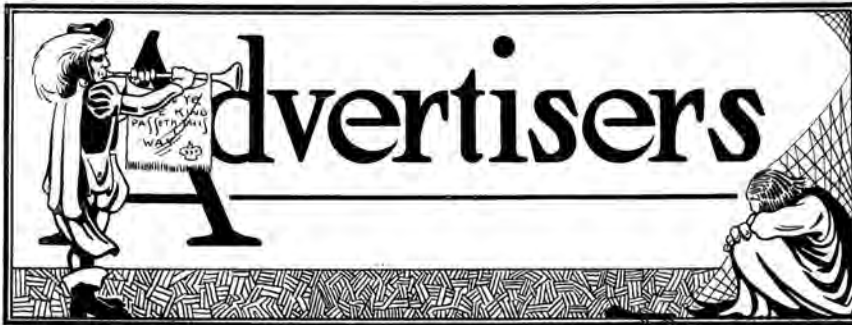

Tomorrow, tomorrow, our school life is o'er;
To-night, ah! to-night let regrets be no more,
Let us search for our fortune hidden so deep;
And bid Time reveal what Providence would keep.

As through each fitting mind, waves of thought ripple on;
And the tide of affections comes rushing upon;
One moment! We stand on the shore now at last;
And the god of the future holds sway o'er the past.

Let us enter at once into fortune's fair halls,
While sweetest affection, our poor hearts enthalls:
And there let us view so calm and serene,
The well-beloved forms of the class of 'fifteen.

First, Harris the editor, marches stately before,
With Collins the lawyer, our leaders of yore,
They were the bright stars of our lost firmament,
The men that gave life to the struggling "Student."

Then Langie of whom the muses do sing,
His powers have brought him within poets' ring;
And Hery who stands at prosperity's gate,
Who is now a strong pillar of the Empire State.

Would that the bards could rise as of old,
And to the wide world Franey's skill would unfold;
As gliding along through life's rosy way,
With O'Keefe, our beloved classmate his only mainstay.

Of all the fair forms before us to-night,
There are two that have risen to fame's dizzy height;
They are Drumm and O'Brien whose surgical skill,
Is known far and wide, they command what they will.

But in Spartan feats where hidden powers are tried,
Schmitt, Grady and Whitman have garnished our pride;
They now pass before us in all of their power,
The joy of the class who over others do tower.

Special for the Graduates

A birthstone ring for the girl graduate makes a most pleasing gift. See our special for the month of May. Genuine stones, Tiffany setting, only $4.50. For the boy graduate, a signet ring made to order with raised initials on signet for $4.50 up, according to weight. We are also showing a special line of lavallieres and other appropriate gifts for the graduates.

Now for Some Fun!

As thoughts now turn from learned books to babbling brooks and you are preparing to take that well-earned vacation, we suggest these essentials of a pleasant journey:

Sturdy traveling bags of cowhide, walrus, seal and cross grain leather, brown and black, $5.00 to $15.00.

Feather light traveling bags of matting and cane, reinforced with leather against hard knocks, 50c to $5.00.

Matting suitcases that a mere slip of a girl can carry, 98c to $5.00.

Stronger lightweight suitcases of cane, $3.00 to $10.00.

And when you go back to school next fall—

Laundry cases of strong fibre with brass edges, $3.00 up.

School trunks, riveted, two trays, hat box, 34 in. size, $10; 36 in size, $10.50.

Basement, Clinton Avenue Side.

Rochester Commercial School

IS A GOOD SCHOOL

Those who have tried it seem to think so too. Some who have had the excellent training given at the Rochester Catholic High School are now in attendance and appear to be pleased. We shall be glad to receive more such young people. They can appreciate, and will be able to turn to their very great advantage, the kind of business training we deal in. VISITORS ALWAYS WELCOME

Ah! Here are the ones to whom homage is due,
Let us bend the knee lowly to this worthy few,
Who are reaping the fruits of their studious toil,
For Jerry, Leo and Carl all burned midnight oil.

Burke plays at third base, a player right through,
He had only one failing, 'twas a good one too;
From a fair-haired boy on his entrance day,
He comes along slowly and old man and gray.

See there are two sages, two pedagogues good,
Who rule their young pupils as good teachers should;
Mr. Drum in the realm of history dwells,
While Coniff holds sceptre o'er literature's wells.

Is that Gerard so close by my side,
Whose liking for farming is Ray's solemn pride?
And Ray whose experiments have made mother earth
More fruitful in yielding a harvest of worth.

See Keating and Murphy who now follow on,
As society gentlemen we'll hand them the palm;
Far greater honors of them we could sing,
But alas, they forgot their books home to bring.

Upon Mr. Martin we all love to look,
He is dressed in fine ermine, a judge with his book;
He and Charles Oster quite fill up the bench,
And their thirst after justice no power can quench.

You recall that balloon which 'round the study hall flew,
And stuck to the ceiling like any good glue;
Twas but the forerunner of a great aeroplane;
We'll be glad to greet Sturmer and Griffin again.

Henry Erbland alone is a bridge-building man,
And many a river, his arches now span;
He too passes on, not boastful or proud,
Though well might the world with his praises ring loud.

And Heinrich whom we thought a musician should be
Has turned out a dealer in drugs, as you see;
Who ever dreamed that pharmacy would claim
A lad of such power, renown and great fame?

In Teall and Lechleitner fair fortune can claim
Two men of great power, prestige and name;
In crowning with gold they've had great success—
They are first class dentists, I must confess.

Collins and Baker, still onward they go,
In studies advanced they make a great show;
Collins in history harrangues of the past
While a chemist's crown has Baker at last.

How you must have hurried to get here for this;
So brilliant in all but that dread "English four,"

The last one has passed in his solemn pride,
Fair fortune with each doth gladly abide.
Ye have heard, O ye bards, what glory we've won,
O depart and record ere our life's course is run.

Let us leave now the future we've delved in so deep,
Sweet thoughts of the present our memory must keep;
But why should we sorrow or why should we fret,
The future's before us, the past we'll not forget.
